Request:

What circumstances have changed over the last 10 years that require a move from traditional expense recovery to an expense recovery that includes various trackers?

Response:

The underlying rationale for utility rate-setting has not changed from that of ten years ago or longer. That is, rates are set to recover prudently incurred costs necessary to provide safe and reliable utility service as efficiently as possible, while also affording the utility an opportunity to realize a reasonable rate of return on its investments. This was the underlying goal that formed the basis for the settlement reached in this proceeding.

However, certain events have occurred in the past several years that make achieving this underlying goal a much bigger challenge than in the past. For instance, the recent unpredictability of financial markets, including debt rates and equity market performance, has a significant impact on Company costs, such as pension and post-retirement benefits other than pensions ("PBOPs"), which are very sensitive to changes in the discount rate and the expected rate of return on assets used to derive current period expense accruals. This sensitivity affects the predictability of Company expense in ways that are out of the control of the Company and often results in significant changes in annual expense amounts, both up and down. Consequently, setting recovery at a rate year estimate might result in significant under- or over-recovery of such costs. Establishing a tracking mechanism ensures that customers pay no more and the Company recovers no less than the actual costs recognized by the Company for these costs, for which significant variability is largely outside of the control of the Company. For that reason, a tracking mechanism for pension/PBOPs is not a novel approach. Operating electric and gas utilities in both Massachusetts and New York, including the operating subsidiaries of National Grid in those two jurisdictions, are subject to pension/PBOP tracking mechanisms[, and, with the exception of Massachusetts Electric Company whose tracker became effective in 2010, were all subject to such mechanisms prior to the establishment of the currently approved pension/PBOP tracking mechanism of the Company's gas operations in Rhode Island.

The economic instability has also resulted in increased competition in the financial markets. A utility's financial stability and its ability or inability to actually earn a fair rate of return affects the ability of that utility to compete for debt capital at the most attractive rates for its customers.

Also, there is a nationwide consensus that both the electric and gas industries are in a cycle of elevated infrastructure investment. In the gas industry, an increased focus on replacement of leak-prone pipe is being seen nationwide and appropriately so. The electric industry is in a cycle of aged infrastructure replacement, which is significantly outpacing the recovery of embedded plant in base rates, or depreciation expense. This increased investment in both the electric and gas industry has had a sizeable impact on the utility's cost of service and has put significant pressure on the need to attract capital and the ability to earn an allowed return.

Another significant change in the ratemaking environment was the establishment of revenue decoupling for both electric and gas operations, which became effective in Rhode Island April 1, 2011, and which eliminated the natural disincentive for a utility company to aggressively pursue and promote efficient use of energy in an effort to ultimately suppress the total cost of energy to customers. Although National Grid embraces the need to aggressively pursue this goal, traditional cost recovery based on a fixed estimate of rate year costs is somewhat at odds with the concept of revenue decoupling. Utility rates are established on a per unit basis, kilowatthour or therm, along with demand units as appropriate. Therefore, the Company's revenue is dependent on actual customer usage. Consequently, prior to decoupling revenues associated with load, or usage, growth was retained by the Company and helped to mitigate the inevitable increases in the Company's Commission-approved cost of service that was used to set the unit rates billed. Revenue decoupling simply limits the amount of revenue the Company will realize to an amount equal to the Commission-approved cost of service upon which those unit rates were set for the electric business and equal to the approved revenue per customer based on the cost of service approved by the Commission in the case of gas operations. Revenue decoupling does not provide any relief for inevitable increases in cost of service. Consequently, establishing certain cost recovery mechanisms for costs that are largely outside the control of the utility becomes increasingly more appropriate in a revenue-decoupling environment.

Request:

What was the cost of the July 18, 2012 Storm Event? What portion of the cost, if any, will be charged to the storm fund?

Response:

Although the Company has yet to complete its internal review of the costs associated with the July 18, 2012 weather event, it estimates that the total incremental costs to be approximately $1.1 million of a total cost of approximately $1.2 million. Of the total estimated incremental costs, the amount the Company anticipates reflecting in the Storm Fund is the amount above the $375,000 deductible, or approximately $0.7 million.

A weather event also occurred on January 12, 2012 for which incremental costs were incurred that exceeded the $781,000 threshold for a qualifying storm event. Similar to the July 18, 2012 event, the Company has yet to complete its internal review of the costs associated with the January 12, 2012 event. However, the Company currently estimates the total incremental costs to be approximately $0.9 million of a total cost of approximately $1.0 million. Of the total estimated incremental costs, the amount the Company anticipates reflecting in the Storm Fund is the amount above the $375,000 deductible, or approximately $0.5 million.

The Company will adjust the amount reflected in the Storm Fund for either event should it find an adjustment is needed as a result of its internal review.
